Can’t Possibly Be True

— A team of researchers from the University of Toronto at Aarhus announced recently that they had developed a prototype of a new technology that might solve the problem of obesity—since it’s about half the size of a grape at five. (The solar technology is always valid.)